MASTER'S THESIS (SOCIAL & POLITICAL THOUGHT / CULTURAL STUDIES)

(Philosophy of Music and Culture / Sociology of Music and Culture)

ABSTRACT

Philosophy of New Jazz: Reconstructing Adorno

Director: Stephen Turner (University of South Florida Distinguished University Professor/Graduate Research Professor/Center for Social and Political Thought Director, Departments of Philosophy, Sociology, and Humanities & Cultural Studies)

Theodor W. Adorno, the towering twentieth century German intellectual figure and distinctive musical thinker, was legendary for being over-critical of jazz music. Through a consideration at his admiration for avant-garde chamber and symphonic music, I plan to develop a position that, surprisingly, points towards a theory of unacknowledged acceptance of jazz. The style of jazz that will be the newly constructed musical idiom of admiration for Adorno will be of the heterodox variety. My method of reconstruction will be to interrogate the inconsistencies in Adorno's critical musical writings, and negate such negations with factual evidence of affirmation found in the avant-garde jazz community. This Hegelian approach to musical scholarship has not been as common in the field's published literature as it should be. A linear motive that will be initiated by this treatise's unfolding will be to restore the integrity to jazz culture which Adorno ravished in the realm of critical theory from the 1930's through the middle part of the twentieth century.

Adorno's two primary interests will undergo a type synthesis in this study that will render justice to both music and philosophy. Early in the study, Adorno's youth experiences with Simmel and Kracauer (as well as his later apprenticeship with Walter Benjamin) will be discussed and an effort will be made to determine how such studies altered Adorno's aesthetic values. I am particularly interested in mapping the development of the theory of aura from Benjamin to Adorno, and how auratic art differs from aura-exuding music. Next, an avant-garde jazz composer will be looked at. This will be done to enforce the point that the next generation of jazz musicians who Adorno disliked so much had firmly committed aesthetic values of their own. The modern social philosophical thought that informed these values, which include Kant's Third Critique up to Anthony Giddens' concept of a double hermeneutic, intersect with Adorno's intellectual background. Thus the scholarly aesthetic distance between the 'new jazz' musician and Adorno, I will show not really that wide.

NEW SCHOOL SENIOR THESIS (ECONOMICS)

ABSTRACT

Reasons the Federal Reserve Should Care About the Rest of the World

Director: Alice Rivlin (Bill Clinton Administration Budget Director, Federal Reserve Vice Chair, Congressional Budget Office Founding Director, Brookings Institution Economic Studies Senior Fellow, New School and Georgetown Graduate School of Public Policy Distinguished University Professor/Graduate Research Professor [Henry Cohen Professor, Milano Graduate School, New School], American Economic Association President Emeritus)

During September through November of 1998, the Federal Reserve lowered the interest rate by 75 basis points. I believe there were international influences behind the Fed's decision-making process during this time period. As the world's largest economy, the U.S. has to set examples and implement policy that will reassure other economies in times of financial crisis. On the other hand, the Fed is the central bank of only the U.S. There are other financial institutions that are organized to operate and regulate from an international scope. Nowhere in the Federal Reserve Act does it state that the Fed, by law, is required to account for the ROW when conducting Open Markets Operations and implementing monetary policy. This raises the issue of the Fed acknowledging international financial events when conducting effective monetary policy at home. Domestically, that endeavor takes into account output, employment and inflation. If the Fed decides to account for the ROW's financial events, then these three economic variables must be analyzed for other nations' economies. I make the claim that the Fed did indeed take into account the ROW when lowering the interest rate in the fall of 1998. The reason why this belief is justifiable is because the U.S. economy was functioning at a very high rate of growth during this time period, and lowering the interest only sped-up this growth process (which can accelerate prices and cause the type of inflation the Fed seeks to minimize). The Russian default created a financial crisis overseas that had the implication of spreading to other economies, including the U.S. Therefore the method of analysis for this study is to acknowledge external factors in U.S. economic policy and to question the extent of influence they should have at the Fed. My conclusion is that only in extraordinary circumstances, like the fall of 1998, does the Fed allow international financial events influence economic policy at home.

Profile / Biography (1371 Words)

Dustin Garlitz is an American educator, academic, philosopher, sociologist, social scientist, music historian, theorist, accomplished avant-garde jazz tenor saxophonist, soloist, performer, improviser, recording artist, bandleader, composer, arranger, author, writer, editor, critic, commentator, columnist, essayist, blogger, journalist, publisher, consultant, presenter, promoter, organizer, teacher, instructor, lecturer, scholar, researcher, expert, and polymath whose interdisciplinary research, scholarship, creative work, and encyclopedic knowledge spans the arts, the humanities, and the social sciences. He is Vice President and Head of Entertainment of Connected World Internet Ventures, a media company which includes the music division of Connected World Music, catering to the music industry. Born and raised in Gainesville, Florida, elementary, middle, and high school were attended at the University of Florida's P.K. Yonge Developmental Research School. His articles & chapters have been published in the U.S., Europe, and Asia. Scholarly research has been presented at international conferences such as the Philosophy of Social Science Roundtable, & he has served as a peer reviewer for prestigious QS World University Rankings & Czech Science Foundation. He has taught philosophy (ethics) at the Social Science Department of Broward College in South Florida. Scholarly videos have been recorded on the London School of Economics, psychoanalysis, and musicians in politics. A member of the Jazz Journalists Association, his philosophical, historical, sociological, and musicological essays on jazz have been used in coursework & lectures in philosophy, cultural studies, and music at the University of North Florida & Central Connecticut State University by leading Frankfurt School philosopher & Jürgen Habermas/Michel Foucault protégé Hans-Herbert Kögler & legendary musician William Hooker. In New York City, he lived in Manhattan's historic neighborhoods of Greenwich Village & Harlem, regularly performing with his band - the Dustin Garlitz Quartet - at renowned jazz clubs, art galleries, and poetry readings in both neighborhoods. As a jazz musician, he has studied extensively with David S. Ware & Charles Gayle, widely regarded as the two leading tenor saxophonists to emerge from the post-John Coltrane era in avant-garde jazz. He has also studied with jazz saxophonists Chico Freeman & Jane Ira Bloom. Performances on tenor saxophone have occurred with leading avant-garde jazz musicians Cecil Taylor, Bill Dixon, Charles Gayle, Roscoe Mitchell, Muhal Richard Abrams, Reggie Workman, Butch Morris, Billy Bang, William Hooker, William Parker, Roy Campbell, Daniel Carter, Sabir Mateen, Cooper-Moore, Byard Lancaster, Reggie Nicholson, Lou Grassi, Jackson Krall, Tristan Honsinger, Andrea Parkins, Roy Nathanson, Avram Fefer, Elliott Levin, Assif Tsahar, Ori Kaplan, Steve Swell, Andrew Bemkey, Lucian Ban, Frank Sullivan, Garry Dial, Armen Donelian, Andy McKee, Lewis “Flip” Barnes, Mark Hennen, Charles Compo, Jason Kao Hwang, David Soldier, Vijay Iyer, Trevor Dunn, and Mary Halvorson. New music concerts & festival performances have been organized which led to albums, masterclass ensembles, and workshops for leading avant-garde jazz musicians & composers Matthew Shipp, Paul D. Miller a.k.a. DJ Spooky, William Parker, Billy Bang, and Joanne Brackeen. Performances in bands include those with electronic musicians & digital sound designers from the Parsons School of Design, avant-garde musicians & dancers from Washington, D.C., experimental rock musicians from Europe, and hip-hop musicians from Harlem. Performances of avant-garde jazz on tenor saxophone have also occurred with renowned poets David Henderson, Steve Cannon, John Farris, and Steve Dalachinsky. Major venues performed at include the Knitting Factory, Brecht Forum, New York Society for Ethical Culture, Harlem’s Lenox Lounge, Brooklyn Academy of Music, A Gathering of the Tribes Gallery, New York University’s Tisch School of the Arts, New School University, and George Washington University, as well as prestigious jazz & new music festivals such as the Vision Festival, and high profile memorials such as those for 9/11. He has released an album as a bandleader & an album as a co-bandleader with Mike Pride, both of which featured his original compositions and arrangements for jazz quartet, selling in the U.S., Europe, and Asia. Since 2012, he has served as a Critic-at-Large for the DownBeat Magazine International Critics Poll & Jazz Journalists Association’s Jazz Awards.
